

A welcome break of excitement and escapism at Ballynatray

FOR a welcome break of excitement and escapism, head for Ballynatray in County Cork where a new Stimulated Driven Shoot located in one of the country's finest estates provides the ultimate experience or simply a great get away with friends.

Ballynatray is a privately owned estate, steeped in history and set in glorious parkland on the Cork and Waterford borders with spectacular and breathtaking views across the river Blackwater. Ballynatray's Stimulated Driven Shoot offers exhilaration and fun using an array of challenging clays. The traps are strategically deployed and send tugs randomly at varying heights and speeds, replicating partridge, grouse and the highest pheasant. Guns will enjoy walking the truly picturesque Ballynatray landscape, to four varied drives with a competition before the final drive.

Ballynatray Estate is also available to hire and together with cottages, a studio and love nest provides accommodation for up to 25 guests. The views are magnificent, unspoilt by the chaos of contemporary lifestyles assuring guests of complete tranquillity. Ballynatray can offer simulated driven shooting for large or small groups from May through to September.

Non-shooting guests are also welcome to accompany groups while shooting and can join groups for lunch. Alternatively, Ballynatray can also provide Archery for non-shooting guests.

An afternoon's shoot in Ballynatray can be extended to a luxurious overnight stay if desired, in one of the estate's many properties.

Martin O'Riordan, Head Game Keeper, with Niamh McCaughey and Neil Porteous at the simulated driven shoot at Ballynatray estate on the River Blackwater on the Cork and Waterford borders.

(Bobbie O'Hara)